Small town living; we’ve all experienced it for a moment in time or a lifetime. Many have chosen to remain in small towns, defined as an incorporated community with less than 5,000 residents, while others found their livelihoods and more opportunities in the big towns or cities. Hamlin’s top population per the 1960 census was 3,791, so in her 100+ year lifespan, she has always remained a small town made up of tough and resilient folks.

There is currently trending on Facebook a little blurb that begins with “I grew up in Hamlin, TX.” followed by a few paragraphs listing the things we experienced that we either positively contributed to or were influenced by in our growing-up years. Most of us can remember the walk-in movie theater, along with the drive-in theater, in addition to other activities including: the portable skating rink that would come to town; the city swimming pool; the Jaycee’s miniature golf course in the park; fun times in the pool hall; the scouting activities for boys and girls; the lighted go-cart race track just north of town; the local rodeos; making the ‘drag’; meeting the passing trains for a chance at some free bubblegum; the annual Jaycee carnival; the annual BCD tennis tournament; the FFA community volleyball tourneys; summer VBS at all of the churches, along with the city-wide revivals in the football stadium; the 4th of July day-long activities in the park closing out with a musical program and fireworks show in the evening; knowing almost everyone in town; having the opportunity for summer or holiday jobs; riding bicycles with the neighborhood gang; front yard football or baseball; Little League baseball games with the Yankees, Giants, Braves, and Cardinals; having plenty of shopping opportunities with the many hometown merchants; and, grabbing a burger or meal at the Limit Café, Lee’s Drive-In and Café, Jordan’s, The Bluebonnet, The City Café, and The Piper. The list could go on forever for whatever time period you spent here in Hamlin. One alumni remarked that she likened her tenure here in Hamlin as living in “Camelot time.” Sadly today, our young people have none or very little of the community activities or venues we once experienced; we must do better.

Unita Blackwell once penned: “To make a small town achieve its potential, you need everybody. When a blind person carries a crippled person who can see, both of them get where they’re going.” A June 1989 magazine, The Electric Times, had an article titled: “Hamlin – A Town That Stays Ahead.” The opening paragraph reads as follows: “If there is any town among the agri-oil economy of West Texas which has that little extra ingredient of personal pride, it is Hamlin.” Perhaps there was no greater showing of community pride as in the Hamlin attendance numbers at the 2019 State Football Playoff when the Pipers faced the Mart Panthers! Although the community has changed in many ways, Hamlin still thrives with various industries in the downtown district that have consumed many of the former retail buildings, along with filling the warehouses at the former Cotton Compress with additional industries and businesses. Our school system has set the bar high for the continuing education of our students. The downtown district is currently undergoing a rehab/restoration push with work by local volunteers, and more new businesses are coming to town, along with the excitement of an active oil boom just south and north of town with hopes that it could be heading Hamlin’s way.

As many of you may be aware, the old hymn “Precious Memories” was composed just outside of Hamlin by resident, John B. F. Wright, in an autumn midnight in 1923 following the loss of his baby son in 1922. The third verse and chorus sums up our “small town living” theme: “In the stillness of the midnight, Echoes from the past I hear, Old-time singing, gladness bringing, From that lovely land somewhere. Precious mem’ries, how they linger, How they ever flood my soul; In the stillness of the midnight, Precious, sacred scenes unfold.”
