

Class of 1981 Coming Home King Nominee: Scott Lamphere

Following my graduation from Hamlin High School in 1981, I attended Angelo State University as a biology /psychology major with a minor in vocal performance. I taught science classes in both the San Angelo and Frenship I.S.D's while pursuing my Master's of Education in Counseling at Texas Tech University, in addition to completing my PhD in Business Management while there.

I spent twenty-two years in the pharmaceutical and healthcare industries in sales, marketing, and executive leadership positions. It was during this time, I also honed in on my passion as a "foodie" and all things culinary as a consultant, caterer, and personal chef. At age fifty, I chose to retire from the corporate healthcare and hospitality world and became a full-time Consulting Chef and Culinary Specialist for the food and service industry. It was during the quarantine period of Covid-19 that I penned my first book, Small Town Kitchen Table that has been sold in thirty-two states and is currently in its fourth printing.

I have been married to my wife, Kim, for thirty-seven years and have two married daughters, Lindsay and Madison, along with three grandchildren. Outside of the kitchen, I enjoy spending time with my family in our cabin in Blue Ridge, GA, or on the Florida beaches. I have been involved in our church through singing in the choir, with the worship and praise teams, and teaching high school Sunday School classes, while also traveling to many countries on mission trips. My wife and I live in Woodstock, GA and our daughters live just a few blocks away!
